ECONOMIC SANCTIONS IN THE GLOBAL ECONOMY | Paris • 25 June 2012

At a time when the global financial crisis has severely impacted trade flows and hampered world growth, what is the effect and the justification for the extraterritorial application of economic sanctions?

The long arm reach of law enforcement agencies puts global companies before unprecedented challenges in terms of conflict of laws and regulatory jurisdiction. What is the right balance between the governments' objective of moving to a safer world and the business reality? How are judges and arbitrators expected to adjudicate a claim against non-performance triggered by foreign economic sanctions?

Conference highlights

This Conference provides a unique public-private forum to discuss the extraterritorial application of economic sanctions. Industry leaders and their counsel will make the case to government officials on both sides of the Atlantic on how sanctions could be better conceived and applied.

Who should attend?

Lawyers, compliance officers, bank executives, general managers, payment and treasury officers in companies and banks, government officials and academics
